

COLLEGE OF VETERINARY MEDICINE

CORNELL UNIVERSITY

Cornell is located in Ithaca, New York, a city of about 30,000 in the Finger Lakes region of upstate New York. Ithaca is one hour by air and a four-hour drive from New York City. The university's 740-acre campus is bounded on two sides by gorges and waterfalls. The tradition of academic excellence, the cultural vigor of a distinguished university, and the magnificent setting create a stimulating environment for graduate study. The college has extensive modern clinical, teaching and research facilities in one central location, believed to be the largest and most modern veterinary facilities in the world.

CURRICULUM: Cornell does not teach a traditional, lecture-based program. Our innovative problem-based curriculum features Interdisciplinary courses taught using a variety of formats. These include: small-and large-group exercises, some lectures, Laboratories, and extensive discussions on actual cases. Courses scheduled during the first three semesters are taught using the tutorial method, in which groups of 6 or 7 students work with a faculty tutor to explore clinical cases. Please visit our web site to learn more about our unique case-based program.

ADMISSION PROCESS: All VMCAS/Cornell applicants must self-initiate the Cornell Supplemental Application on-line by November 1 and pay a fee. Since your VMCAS data arrives later, Cornell cannot remind you to self-initiate your Supplemental. Detailed instructions are available on-line. Please review them early in the admissions process. Many documents can take several weeks for you to obtain. Cornell's on-line forms are available at our web site until November 1. Completed applications are reviewed by the Admissions Committee; without an interview. Admissions decisions are made in February. Admitted applicants are invited to attend information sessions, which are held in March. Application procedure updates are available in our Free Pre-Vet Newsletter. Request one at <https://www.vet.cornell.edu/admissions/application/inquiry.asp>
